MRS. ZANE'S WILL FOUND

Her Son Questioned and the Police Start On a New Clue—El Shaw Platnick.

Camden's double murder mystery returned to the fore of the local police and a new triangle of suspicion danced about the area. After the unsolved Stockton disaster, the police had been working on the case and had finally discovered a new clue that pointed to a burglar as the perpetrator. However, upon further investigation, it was discovered that the burglar had an alibi, and the police were left scratching their heads.

In the meantime, Mrs. Zane's will had been found, which threw the police into a new investigation. It was discovered that the will was written by her son, El Shaw Platnick, who had recently been found in the vicinity of the crime scene. The police were now working on the possibility that the burglary was committed by someone else who had a motive for killing Mrs. Zane.

Young Shaw Hears It.

When the newspapers reported the discovery of Mrs. Zane's will, Young Shaw Platnick, who had been working in the vicinity of the crime scene, was interviewed by the police. He denied having any knowledge of the murder and claimed to have been working on his own business at the time of the crime. However, the police were not convinced and continued to investigate him further.

The police have obtained some additional information that may be helpful in solving the case. For example, they have learned that a man who had been seen in the area on the night of the murder was spotted by witnesses leaving the building with a large sum of money. They are now searching for this man in the hopes of obtaining more information.

The case remains unsolved, and the police are still working on the investigation. However, they are confident that they will eventually find the truth behind this tragic event.
