

100 GIRLS IN FIRE SCARE; CHIEF'S AUTO OVERTURNS

Responding to an alarm of fire from the plant of the General Gas Mantle Company, at Fourth street and Jefferson avenue, Camden, yesterday afternoon, Fire Chief Stockton and his chauffeur, Martin Carrigan, had a close call from injury at Broadway and Kaighn avenue. The car skidded in turning the corner and crashed into a beer truck. The chief and his driver jumped as the machine turned over. Neither was hurt.

The fire was in the dip room of the plant. The loss was trifling, but the hundred or more girls employed there were nearly in a panic making their escape. None was hurt.

Drowns Wearing Life Preserver

Despite the fact that he wore a life preserver when he went bathing in the Delaware yesterday, Richard Knorr, a member of the crew of the German steamer Prince Oskar, lying off Kaighn's Point, Camden, lost his life when apparently attacked with cramps. The fact that Knorr wore a preserver inclined the Camden police to the belief that he had deserted the ship, but late in the day Policeman Gondolf hooked the body with grappling irons off Jackson street. The preserver was still in place. Coroner Bushey viewed the body.

CAMDEN AT A GLANCE

Raphael De Skasvanis, aged 32, an Italian painter, of Philadelphia, was killed at Cedar brook yesterday by an Atlantic City railway train, northbound. He stepped from back of a southbound train in front of the express.

Arraigned before Recorder Stackhouse yesterday on a charge of being responsible for the death of Mrs. Angiola Cosinotto, who was run over by his automobile, Ascero Potts asked that the hearing be adjourned until August 24, pleading pressing business engagements. His request was granted and Recorder Stackhouse continued his $500 bail. Potts is president of the Potts Manufacturing Company, of East Camden.

Mrs. Mirtle E. Nye, drawing instructor in Camden High School, who is touring Europe, is safe at Florence, Italy. A cablegram received yesterday covered this information.

Because he had been kind to her, Joseph Worley gets the entire estate of Sarah A. Wright, whose will was admitted to probate yesterday. The estate is worth $1000.
