ARMISTICE SERVICES IN CAMDEN CHURCHES

Legion Posts and Laymen Join in Conducting Patriotic Exercises

Hebrew Society Holds Memorial for Members Who Lost Lives in War

Armistice Day services were held in some of the Camden churches yesterday. At the services at Broadway M. E. Church were sung patriotic songs, followed by a presentation of a movie, illustrated by colored stereopticon slides. Rev. W. Earl Ledden preached.

Members of C. Thoin Post, American Legion, attended the services at the First Presbyterian Church, Fifth and Penn streets. Rev. George H. Holmes, of the American Legion, delivered a address. The musical programme was given. Special services were held in the Cedar Brook and New Brooklyn churches. In the Cedar Brook Church an address was delivered by Charles M. Curry, a layman, of Broadway M. E. Church, Camden. Special music was given. Rev. Horace S. Miller, pastor, was the speaker.

At Tabernacle M. E. Church, Third and Pearl streets, Camden, Chief Manager of the American Legion, delivered an address. The address was followed by a piano solo by Miss Mabel Brewer, and an address by Rabbi Samuel Friedman, chaplain of the congregation.

In memory of the five Y. M. H. A. members who lost their lives in the war, a service was held at Y. M. H. A. building, 570 Walnut street, Camden, yesterday afternoon. The services were opened with prayer by Rabbi Solomon Grayzel.

After Lewis Lederer, of Oaklyn, was hit by an automobile at Broadway and Keigley avenues, he was taken to Cooper Hospital in the machine that hit him. He wanted to know: "What happened to the machine? I guess it hurt more than I was," he said, and refused to make complaint. The driver of the car, Warren B. Cooney, of Gloucester, was not arrested.

An attempt at suicide was made yesterday by William Strong, 30, a resident of 704 Federal street, Camden, where he had a room. He was found unconscious in bed. He was taken to Cooper Hospital in the machine that hit him, in a condition from inhaling gas. He had been ill.
