

CAMDEN NEWS NOTES

 Last week a thief purloined the favorite pipe of Circuit Court Judge Endicott in the Camden Court House. This fact became known to the jurors serving this term, and yesterday, through Edward L. Cobb, they presented the Judge with a handsome meerschaum pipe. In an address of appreciation Judge Endicott accepted the present.

 Death came within a few inches of Rev. J. W. Blachoff, pastor of the Audubon Presbyterian Church, yesterday. He was crossing the tracks of the Reading Railway during a dense fog and failed to see an approaching train until it was upon him. The minister leaped to safety, but not before the pilot had struck his foot and severely bruised it.

 Accidentally shot by a companion, Paul S. Kidd, a Pennsgrove youth, was admitted to the Cooper Hospital yesterday with one of his hips badly shattered. Kidd and his companion were gunning in the vicinity of Pennsgrove for rabbits.

 Drs. J. El Donges and Grant E. Kirk yesterday began the erection of sixteen dwellings on Viola street, near Broadway.

Judge Samuel P. Jones, Dr. Paul Meccray and Louis B. Humphrys sat as a commission on lunacy yesterday in the case of Theodore Hickman, who was recently awarded $3500 by a jury against the Public Service Railway Company. As a result of his injuries Hickman has gone insane.

The will of William McElhenny, of Gloucester City, was admitted to probate by Surrogate Reeves yesterday. The estate is valued at $5000.

Peter Cella, 42 years old, of 322 Cherry street, was treated at the Homeopathic Hospital last night for a dog bite wound of the thigh.

Mrs. Annie Gotschalk, 32 years old, of 643 Ferry avenue, fractured her collar bone in a fall downstairs last night. She was taken to the Cooper Hospital.

Falling beneath a wagon, Steward Mann, 13 years old, of Oaklyn, was severely injured about the back, last night. His injuries were treated at the Cooper Hospital.
